The Privileged View

Steve Beste, President

Women Can Fly. “This is so cool!” cried the twenty-something woman as she swung the bar of my trike side to side. “I had no idea these things even existed!” Maybe one day she’ll become a trike pilot, or a PPG pilot, or heck, any kind of pilot.

I was delighted, of course, but I was also happy to talk with the man in his fifties who has always wanted to fly but didn’t know there were possibilities beyond flying a Cessna. He took a snapshot of the website URL on my sign, and who knows? Maybe he’ll join us light flyers.

I had my trike on static display at the Women Can Fly event at the Warrenton-Fauquier Airport, trolling for people – men or women – who might be interested in light aviation.

I was not alone. Frank Noe and Kurt Mohr had their gyroplanes there. Lucy Ooi was giving rides in Rudolph, her 1947 Aeronca Champ, and 26 other pilots were giving rides. All in all, 184 rides were given, almost all to young women.

Wrote a Girl Scout leader, “Our scouts had the BEST time today. I got off my ride last and when I rejoined the group they were just ecstatic and glowing. Heard several say how they thought they might like to try to get a pilot license someday.”

Wrote a wife, “I attended with my daughters and husband and it inspired all of us! My girls had wonderful experiences with their pilots, They also loved talking with Hannah and Mia (glider) and feel like aviation is something that isn’t a mystery but can be attainable. We will keep an eye out for more events but might be making a trip or two to Front Royal for some opportunities to try gliders. My husband, David, was a commercial pilot for a while and yesterday’s event sparked a desire to become current again.”

Half of the flight line. 27 aircraft gave rides, including a helicopter.

The event was superbly produced by Sarah Patten of Women Can Fly, a volunteer organization whose mission is to promote flying among women of all ages. Her organization of the event was flawless as near as I can tell. The organization has been doing these events at KHWY since 2013 and the experience shows. As Sarah wrote later, thanking us volunteers,

“Something as small as having hair ties available at Women Can Build to help keep long hair away from drills is just as important as suggestions on ramp layout and flight paths when it comes to keeping the event safe and successful. I meant it when I said you put a lot of smiles on a lot of faces.”

The day included free box lunches for everyone, as you see here in the spacious main lounge in the new terminal building at KHWY.

The Virginia Dept of Aviation showed up with their new Icon A5 in tow. At first, I wondered why my tax dollars were buying a 2-seat amphibian. But no. It was a gift from Icon, along with the fancy trailer. It came with the stipulation that it not be flown. I suppose this particular plane has some flaw, and this is the best use of it. DoA tows it to schools and events like this to promote aviation.

Women can Build. It was not just about flying. The local EAA chapter had their own tent where girls could get hands-on with airplane construction tools.

Was it a long day? Oh, yes. But if we want more pilots, more mechanics, and more companions in the sky, then we need to put the word out. This is what doing that looks like. And it was fun hearing people say, “This is so cool!” Consider coming next year yourself.

Fly safely,
Steve

From Our Members

A hearty CONGRATULATIONS to Jim Hill! After 20 years of work on his Fisher Celebrity, the wings were rigged and it was out in the sunshine on its gear. Looking good Jim!

Last month, I missed this awesome picture of Kurt Mohr at the Bear River Fly-in with the “Pilots of Tomorrow”! This is a great reminder that we should all be out “corrupting the youth” so there are people to leave our planes to when we hang up our headsets.

Bob Chapman submits some Lazair humor for our enjoyment.

"I'M SORRY MR. CHAPMAN, YOU CAN NOT EARN YOUR MULTI-ENGINE RATING IN THAT AIRCRAFT!"

Quiz

Tom Simmons was again the first response, but he only narrowed the mystery location down to the Shenandoah Valley. The first one to identify the Shenandoah Speedway in Shenandoah, VA was guest Justin Rodes of Bear River airport. Jim Heidish adds more detail, noting that it is the Massanutten range we see in the background. Steve Beste also guessed the speedway. Nice job guys!

This month's quiz picture was submitted by Steve Beste. He asks "Where is this dead-end valley? It's within 50 miles of Warrenton."

Know the answer or have a picture for the guessing game? Email me at ooi.lucy@gmail.com.

Flamping Adventures

By Mark Barron

Recently I went on some Flamping (flying/camping) trips with the trailer for at minimum one night at each place I flew around. Loving the trailer setup with Starlink (142 Mbps)!! I'm taking this working remotely thing to the next level!

New Hangar Skylights at KHWY

By Lucy Ooi

A very small but very strong thunderstorm cell hit the Warrenton-Fauquier airport (KHWY) the evening of June 1, with what was likely a microburst that ripped the roof off of one row of the older county-owned T-hangars. Unfortunately for yours truly, both of my hangars were in that row (housing my Aeronca Champ and Bellanca Cruisemaster).

The roof peeled off fairly cleanly from the hangars. I found very few nails and almost no pieces of metal/wood from the roof inside my hangars. Photo courtesy Dave Darrah

My airplanes were dirty, but undamaged. The hangars were a mess though. My shelves got knocked over though and everything had blown around and gotten soaked.

The only airplane that was damaged was the skydivers' jump plane. There was a close call though! A large piece of wood came down two hangars down from mine and landed right between the wings of the two aircraft in that space. Whew!

The local news picked up on the event with a photo of my airplane in its newly roofless hangar. The airport manager had initially called it “tornadic activity” but it does not appear that there was a tornado.
